

BILL OF MORTALITY

Prepared by Scott Shepherd
January 2008

Records of those interred in colonial cemeteries often depend on the diligence of those in future generations recording the inscription on grave markers. However, when resorting to a survey of grave stones to identify those who are buried in a colonial cemetery such as the Presbyterian Church Burying Ground it must be recognized that many grave sites probably never were graced by a marker, or if placed, the marker may have long since deteriorated by the time the record of inscriptions was initiated. Fortunately for those interested in tracing their ancestors who lived in the area served by the Presbyterian Church in Morristown during Colonial Times, the Bill of Mortality offers an alternative source of information.

The Bill of Mortality was initiated in July 1768 by Reverend Timothy Johnes. Following his death in 1794, the record was maintained until 1806 by William Cherry, the Church Sexton.

It is of interest that this record identifies 1680 individuals including one set of twins. Of that total, surnames were available for only 1586. The other 94 were identified variously as "Servant of" and the name of the family or "Illegitimate Child," etc. Of the 1586 for whom surnames are available, 1388 are individuals, who could have been buried in either the Presbyterian or Old Baptist Burying Grounds, whose names have never appeared in any known grave stone based compilations. Certainly a modest estimate that a few hundred of these individuals found their final resting place in the Presbyterian Burying Ground does not seem unreasonable given that numerous unmarked graves were unearthed in the vicinity of the oldest portion of the Burying Ground during the construction of the present Sanctuary Building in 1893.

Several factors contribute to the disparity between the number of individuals listed in the Bill of Mortality and largely grave stone inscription based compilations, such as Who's Who In The Grave Yard Of The Presbyterian Church In Morristown.

First and foremost is the fact that the Bill of Mortality contains the names of congregants in both the Presbyterian and Baptist Churches, while the Who's Who In The Grave Yard Of The Presbyterian Church In Morristown deals solely with those affiliated with the Presbyterian Church.

A second contributing factor was the depressed economy in Colonial Times resulting from the repressive acts of the British against the colonies, e.g., The Iron Acts, The Stamp Act, etc. In such hard times the placement of a marker bearing an appropriate inscription easily could be considered an extravagance. Indeed it was not uncommon to bury the remains of the departed on the family farm with a simple field stone, with or without any inscription, as the only marker.

A third factor was the unusually high infant mortality rate by today's standards. An analysis contained in the Bill of Mortality of the age at the time of death of those who died between 1 July 1790 and 1 July 1806 reveals that 145 or 23% were individuals who died before reaching the age of one. Fully 256 or almost 46% were individuals who died before reaching the age of five. For many of these infants the Bill of Mortality entry merely reads "Child of" followed by the name of the father. If the given name of the deceased was not recorded, it follows that a marker very well might not have been placed at their grave site.

Some idea of the proportion of burials having taken place in each of the Presbyterian and Old Baptist Burying Grounds may be gained through the Bill of Mortality which identified the congregational affiliation of about 20% of the individuals listed. Based on the relative proportion of Presbyterians to Baptists in that sample, it would appear reasonable to assume slightly more than 50% of the individuals, who were not laid to rest on a family farm, found their final resting place in the Presbyterian Burying Ground rather than the Old Baptist Burying Ground behind their respective churches on "The Green."

Another consideration is the fact that of the two churches, the Presbyterian Church was founded nineteen years earlier than the Baptist Church, i.e., 1733 vs. 1752, and the Baptist Church did not locate to the site on "The Green" until May of 1771.

Based on these factors, it seems likely that a few more of the individuals, whose grave sites have not been identified, found their final resting place in the Presbyterian Burying Ground than in the Old Baptist Burying Ground behind their respective churches on "The Green."

It is well documented that an untold number of soldiers were interred in one or more mass graves in the Presbyterian and Old Baptist Burying Grounds during the small pox epidemic while Washington was encamped in Morristown in 1777. A marker placed by The Daughters of the American Revolution commemorates the individuals whose final resting place is in the Presbyterian Church Burying Ground. A similar marker was placed in Evergreen Cemetery, where remains were moved, following the vacating of the Old Baptist Burying Ground in 1892

In recent years during the preparation of the Who's Who In The Grave Yard Of The Presbyterian Church In Morristown, this compiler cannot recall the grave site of any soldier from outside of Morris County who served in the American Revolution being identified. However, recent interest in tracing one's ancestors precipitated by data bases available using the Internet resulted in the confirmation of Colonel Daniel Hitchcock of Rhode Island as being interred in the Presbyterian Church Burying Ground. In this case the interment was documented through an entry in the Diary of Sergeant William Young of Pennsylvania made available through the Historian at Morristown National Historical Park. The specific grave site however is known only to God.

In conclusion, it is safe to say that far more individuals are interred in the Burying Ground of The Presbyterian Church in Morristown than compilations based on grave markers have been able to document.

It is interesting to note that in a majority of the cases in compiling the record Reverend Johnes opted to record the cause of death. Perhaps contributing to his decision to record the cause of death was that in Colonial Times ministers were among the most highly educated members of their community. As a result they often found themselves ministering to the physical as well as the spiritual needs of their flock. It is well documented that Timothy Johnes, Jr. established a reputation of his own as "The Surgeon on Horseback" during Washington's retreat across New Jersey in late Autumn of 1776. Much of his medical know-how is believed to have come from his father.

The first of the two listings that follow presents, in an alphabetical format, the 1586 individuals whose surnames are known. When the Congregational Affiliation was recorded, the names of Baptist Congregants appear in RED and those of the Presbyterian Congregants appear in BLUE. The names of 149 individuals who have been identified in other compilations of those interred in the Burying Ground of the Presbyterian Church are underlined. When the cause of death or the date of death was not recorded, the notation "NR" has been entered. The names of 42 individuals who among other things may have been “buried out of Parish” appear in Italics. Of the 1586 identified the following fifteen are known to have been reinterred at Evergreen Cemetery from their original resting place:

From The Old Baptist Burying Ground To Evergreen

Esther Brookfield—Wife of John d. 1780
 Isaac Brookfield d. 1776
 John Brookfield d. 1777
 John Brookfield d. 1795
