JOURNEYING TO JERUSALEM: EXPLORING LENT THROUGH CONVERSATIONS

Reverend Daniel Vigilante, Pastor

DEAR PCM FAMILY,

The season of Lent begins - which means it's time for that perennial question, "What are you giving up this year?"

The practice of giving up something for Lent goes way back to the early church, when - in anticipation of their baptism (which only happened on Easter Sunday) - new converts to the faith entered into a forty day period of prayer and fasting. They'd have a big party on Mardi Gras (which literally means, Fat Tuesday), then begin their baptismal preparation on Ash Wednesday, the first day of Lent.

These days we baptize people at other times of the year besides just Easter Sunday, but the practice of giving up something during Lent has remained; even if we don't spend these forty days praying and fasting in quite the same way those early Christians did.

One idea that's caught on more recently is that, rather than giving up something, we might take on something instead. Some people take on the practice of doing a daily devotional; or take on doing a daily walk or exercise.

Here at PCM, our theme for this Lenten season is Conversations: Journeying with Jesus to Jerusalem. In our worship, and through our Lenten Devotional (which is available online and in book-form), we're looking at conversations people had when they encountered Jesus, and conversations that we've had that have deepened our faith.

It strikes me that a spiritual practice we might take on this Lent is to commit ourselves to having conversations that can draw us closer to God and to others. For example, we might have a conversation with someone from whom we have become estranged. We might have a conversation with someone from whom we are seeking forgiveness. We might have a conversation with our children about why our faith matters to us. We might have a conversation with a neighbor who is on the opposite side of the political fence - and try to understand one another better as the next election cycle heats up.

I can think of a-hundred-and-one different conversations I could have with people... some of which I've avoided or simply put off for another day. But maybe this season of Lent is just the right time to take them on. Are there conversations like that which you've been meaning to have - but keep putting off, too?

Whatever you choose to do this Lent - whether you give up something or take on something - I hope and pray that this season draws you closer to the God who created you and who loves you.

In Christ's love,
Daniel

FRIENDS,

This Lent, we share stories about conversations.

It is our hope that these Scripture passages and personal reflections will be a guide for you as we journey together as a church through this season. Within the pages of our Lenten devotional (the first three days can be found on the following pages), you will find conversations that have been particularly meaningful.

During different times in our lives, we experience all kinds of conversations that change us in some way. This year, we are thinking about how we find meaning in conversations and how they deepen our relationships with God and each other. During this season, we are diving into those very conversations in the Bible. In this devotional and during our Lenten Adult Ed series, you will see how the Scripture passages intersect with stories from our lives. With a diverse range of theological and political beliefs and outlooks, we hope these reflections inspire your own reflections on these sacred texts.

Blessings to you during this season of Lent,
Audrey

A LENTEN JOURNEY

DOUGHNUTS AND THEOLOGY: TALKING TOGETHER AS WE JOURNEY WITH JESUS

Come talk with us! As we journey together this Lenten season, we will explore the intersection of faith, community, and personal journeys through conversation and reflection. During Doughnuts and Theology (every Sunday at 8:45 am, in the Chapel and online), we'll discuss the texts we will be delving into during our Lenten sermon series on journeying with Jesus.

We will consider the conversations that have changed our lives and have taken us in wildly different directions on our faith journeys. Join us in our discussions on faith, life, and everything in between. Through interactive activities and conversation, we will explore what it means to find faith and Jesus amidst the wildness every day brings.

Some of the topics we'll cover:

- Holy Subtext - The Rich and the Kingdom of God
- Mysterious Sayings - The Destruction of the Temple and Signs of the End Times

Whether you can come to one or all, we can't wait to journey together this Lenten Season!

GENESIS 12:1-3 | REV. DANIEL VIGILANTE | GOD'S CONVERSATION WITH ABRAM CALLING HIM TO LEAVE HIS COUNTRY.

In this conversation between God and Abram, a covenant was established. God would “make a great nation” and bless all families of the earth through Abram and his wife Sarai. While I have never had that kind of conversation with God, I am a descendant of this covenant and have often felt blessed in order that I might be a blessing.

In fact, you might think that the word “bless” would be the one that stands out most, as it is used five times in these three short verses. But the part of this conversation that resonates with me is the word “Go.”

Each Sunday at the close of our time together, I say, “Our worship ends, but our service begins...” In other words, “Go! Go forth from this place to do justice, love kindness, and walk humbly with God.” The whole idea that we go to church feels a bit incomplete. Because, in reality, we go from church to love our community in the name of Jesus.

Just as Abram and Sarai were commissioned to go from the comforts they knew and into the place God called them, we are commissioned to go from the comfort of our church home to the places where God has called us.

Which begs the question...where is God calling you to go during this season of Lent?

GENESIS 32:22-32 | CRAIG BARTH | JACOB'S CONVERSATION AND WRESTLING WITH GOD AT PENIEL.

When have you, with a hard decision looming or in a spat with a spouse, taken a step away and demanded, “Let me sleep on it”?

In a deep sleep, our brains reorganize, erase the trivial, and place to near consciousness whatever our minds deem significant. We may pre-empt this process by placing a thought, feeling, idea, or even face “first in line” to this mental reorganization. More amazing is that upon awakening, the “first in line” from this reorganization emerges transformed, often in surprising ways! Meditation or prayer, prior to slumber, can jumpstart this. Have you ever awakened unusually content, peaceful, or with an “aha”? God spoke to you while you slept.

Now Jacob – At the place he later named Peniel (“Struggle with God”), Jacob sent his full cadre ahead of him (v. 23). He knew brother Esau wanted him dead. So bad was their relationship that Esau rejected Jacob’s appeasement gifts. All alone, Jacob fell into tormented sleep. While he slept, he conversed and fought with this entity. Stubborn Jacob received a truth that night that hurt. Yet, Jacob knew that the truth came from God.

Whatever the truth was, it resulted in a relationship healing. In chapter 33, “they ran to each other, embraced, and wept.”

God heals our relationships, even while we sleep.

“Let me sleep on it.”

EXODUS 3 | SAM FAIRCHILD | GOD'S CONVERSATION WITH MOSES AT THE BURNING BUSH.

Helping organizations with their vision statements, I watch as people look inward to discover important things about themselves. But in 2017, I became an inward-looking person for the first time.

Pastor Michael Howard, interim pastor at my old church, and I led the recreation of the church's vision statement. We talked often about who we were as a church and where we wanted to go. Our backgrounds were very different. He had very liberal views, and I had rather conservative perspectives. Yet we found much common ground about the church and even more about ourselves. We were seekers, thinking progressively about how to follow in the footsteps of Jesus.

We produced a pithy, resonant vision statement for our church. More importantly, our months of conversation led each of us to a deeper understanding of our own purpose and the nature of our relationship with God, which defies time and space.

Linda and I recently visited Pastor Michael. The strength of our embrace in greeting reaffirmed the strength of our work together and how it altered my trajectory. While it expressed our church's vision to "strive to be a progressive, inclusive community of seekers serving others while challenging ourselves to understand and practice the teachings of Jesus," what it did for me was so much more profound.

A HEART-TO-HEART WITH JESUS

Alexandra Mead, Director, Christian Education

The Sunday school and midweek children have been learning the stories that Jesus told his followers as he traveled from town to town, teaching of God's love. Jesus loved to use parables to explain things to his listeners. The kids love to act out and role play the stories. We talk about how the lessons that Jesus taught can be applied to our lives right now.

Teaching children about scripture through conversations with Jesus can be a meaningful and engaging way to help them understand how God wants us to live and how to love one another.

When you read a children's bible to your child, encourage them to imagine themselves in the story. Help them to develop a personal connection with Jesus through prayer. Remind them every day that they are a child of God and that God loves them no matter what.

This is a good thing for all of us to remember!

PALM SUNDAY CHILDREN'S PARADE | MARCH 24 | 9:45 AM

All children are invited to participate in a parade from the Howard House into the Sanctuary with palms right before worship. All children are welcome to gather at 9:45 am on the front porch of Howard House.

CONVERSATIONS THAT MATTER

Jeanne Mueller, Director, Presbyterian Church Nursery School

One of the essential things we work on here at our Nursery School is communication.

At the Presbyterian Church Nursery School (PCNS), we know that we are working with children that are still learning to talk, but the conversations we have with them are so important. If you heard some of the sweet or silly things these children say, you might chuckle... but don't underestimate how important young preschooler's words can be!

We may start the year trying to decipher what some of these little ones are saying, but we often find ourselves thoroughly impressed with their words at the end of the school year journey. During our year, we may notice a child expressing empathy for a classmate, telling us a story from home about a trip or experience they had, or answering questions with ease in front of a group. Our staff is always eager to hear from our students as it helps build our strong community in each classroom.

Conversations with families are also an important part of the preschool experience. Parents are sometimes hesitant to share any struggles they are having with their children's development or behavior. We aim to create a safe space and sense of community here, so parents often are relieved to discover that some of the frustrations raising young preschoolers are all part of the process and often shared by other parents. It is always reassuring to have conversations with parents at our conference time when we assess children's progress in school. Our staff is glad to help parents and children navigate these first years of education successfully.

The staff here at PCNS also have many conversations along our school year journey. We look for support in trying to figure out the best way to handle a child or parent that might be struggling. Hearing a different technique from a staff member is helpful and inspires fellow teachers to try something new. We express support for each other throughout the school year – an invaluable part of our staff relationships. We celebrate the wins for every child and staff member – we are so proud of the community we create through our conversations.

“WHERE HAVE ALL THE FLOWERS GONE...”

Carolyn Crosthwaite, Worship and Music Committee Chair

You may think of this refrain, originally written by Pete Seeger in 1955, when you enter the Sanctuary on Sunday, February 17, the first Sunday in Lent. That is because the flowers will be gone from our worship space. The Worship & Music committee has decided to observe this period of sacrifice by giving up flowers for Lent for the six Sundays before Easter.

“WHERE HAVE ALL THE FLOWERS COME FROM...”

You could create this variation on the above refrain when you enter the Sanctuary on Easter Sunday, March 31 and see the blaze of color and smell the fragrance of the beautiful spring flowers and Easter lilies that will once again adorn our chancel. What a truly joyful experience this will be after our drab, colorless time of Lent.

So...where do these flowers come from? They come from you, through your donations to the church flower fund, managed by the W&M committee. If you wish to contribute to the Easter flowers, you can visit pcmorristoryn.org/easter-remembrances, use the pink flower envelope in the pew pocket, or get in touch with the office at office@pcmorristoryn.org. Watch for future information about where the flowers each Sunday morning come from (hint: your donations).

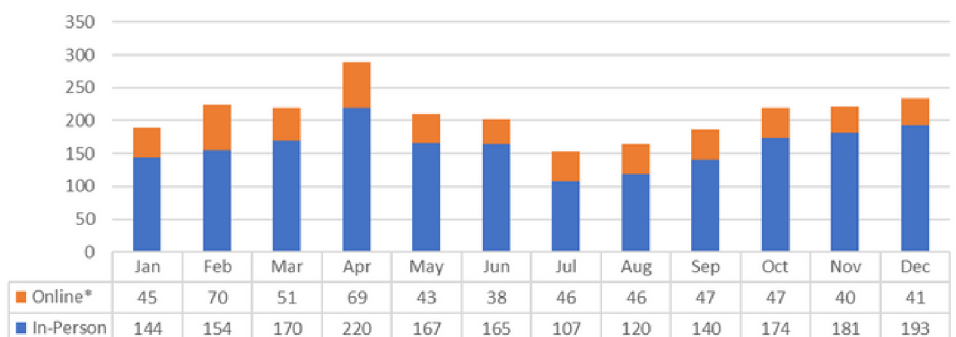

For now, prepare for the somber period of Lent by thinking of the sacrifice our Lord Jesus made for us and the small way we are honoring that sacrifice this year here at PCM.

RECOGNITION SUNDAY

On February 4, 2024, The Presbyterian Church in Morristown recognized faithful members who have journeyed with, served, and helped shape our church community in countless ways for 50 years or more. 65 members were honored as part of the worship service and celebrated with a reception in the Narthex organized by the Community and Membership committee, led by Sherry Guthrie, herself among the honorees. Jan and Bruce Frazier mined church directories for the photos displayed for the reception and reproduced here along with the year each became a member.
